Rules and Compliance

All researchers that are funded through this program must comply to the rules and regulations of the Fonds de recherche du Québec; which can be found in Les règles générales communes who describes, among other rules, eligible expenses.

The RSBO is expecting acknowledgement of their support in any communication or publications generated through the funded project. The RSBO reserves the right to request a list of all publications or abstracts that result from the project funded through this program.

The RSBO reserves the right to contact researchers to produce a short video (2-3 minutes) of the funded project.

This program seeks to:

- a) Facilitate collaborations between researchers from different locations, fields and expertise's around common research themes,
- b) Support researchers in developing innovative projects that will increase their chances to obtain major grants from national or international agencies,
- c) Generate substantial scientific knowledge that will contribute to major discoveries which ultimately will impact the scientific community as well as the public.

Eligibility Criteria

- The Principal Investigator must be a regular member of the RSBO.
- The research team must include at least three members from at least two different institutions.
- A regular member can submit only one application as a principal investigator.
- A principal investigator cannot apply for this competition if they already received funding from our previous competition (summer 2018).
